E. H. POLLARD, ESQ.

The Schemes of a Local Bank for this Colony with Branches at the most important places in China, has been in contemplation for a very long period.

The local and foreign trade in Hongkong and at the open ports in China and Japan has increased so rapidly within the last few years that additional Banking facilities are felt to be required.

The Banks now in China being only branches of Corporations whose head quarters are in England or India, and which were formed chiefly with the view of carrying on exchange operations between those countries and China, are scarcely in a position to deal satisfactorily with the local trade which has become so much more extensive and varied than in former years.

This deficiency the Hongkong and Shanghai Banking Company will supply, and will in fact assume the same position with relation to this Colony as the Presidency Banks in India, or the Banks of Australia in their respective localities.

The Establishment of a Mint in Hongkong, providing an adequate supply of proper currency, will render a local Banking medium essential to carry out its operations, and the almost certain disappearance of the existing Compradore system (so far as money is concerned) will also enable Banks becoming in course of time the exclusive medium for the transaction of the monetary operations connected with trade.

For the anticipated success of this enterprise there are therefore ample grounds; and the great prosperity which has attended the working of other local associations in China clearly shows that the largest profits are obtained by those Public Companies which possess an interested local body of Proprietors or Shareholders whose support naturally forms a chief element of remunerative success.

The Bank will commence operations simultaneously in Hongkong and Shanghai and as the importance of its business at the latter place must be very great, it is intended to establish a local Board of Directors there for more effectually meeting the work. As circumstances render it advisable the Bank will establish Branches at other places.

In the distribution of Shares Hongkong and Shanghai will equally participate. Shares will also be reserved for the other ports in China and Japan and for persons residing elsewhere, who are directly interested in the China Trade.

Applications for Shares must be addressed until further notice, to the Provisional Committee, care of

THIS Company has been formed for the purpose of purchasing a site in the Colony of Hongkong for Docks and constructing Docks and erecting suitable Premises thereon for carrying on the Business of Building or Docking and Repairing Steamers and Sailing Vessels, and for the purchase of the Docks now owned and carried on at Whampoa by Messrs. T. HUNT & Co. with the Appurtenances Plant and Good-will of the Docking Business of that Firm.

It is proposed to register the Company as one of Limited Liability either under the Imperial Act or under any Ordinance which the local Legislature may pass enabling local Companies to do so, the property of the Company in the meantime being vested in the Trustees, and the Deed of Settlement of the Company, now in course of preparation, is being framed in accordance with this intention.

The very considerable increase in the number of Vessels employed in what may be termed local trade, or in voyages that either originate or terminate, at Hongkong, in addition to the great quantity of tonnage visiting the Port from all quarters of the World, afford ample scope for the proposed Docks in the Colony, and the project has been favourably entertained, steps being in progress to facilitate this object, the necessary preliminary investigations as to the suitable character of the proposed site having been conducted and satisfactorily reported upon, by Mr. S. B. RAWLINS.

Liberal support has been promised to the undertaking which it is contemplated must necessarily prove a very remunerative one.

Further applications for Shares can till further notice be addressed to the Undersigned from whom forms of application and all particulars can be obtained.

THE P. & O. S.N. Co. steamer Azof arrived yesterday afternoon from the Southern Stations. The West Derby sailed from Foochow for London on 8th, Oct. the Gem for Lion and Gauntlet were ready to leave.

Tremendous excitement prevails at Amoy. It is reported that rebels (we do not hear exactly what kind) are within fifteen miles of the city causing the greatest alarm. Nearly the whole of the vessels in harbour have been chartered by the merchants, native and foreign to remain in the harbour and receive on board if necessary, all valuables &c. Nearly all the cargo that was up in the Pekin for Amoy, has returned in the Azof. The Surveying vessels, Dove and Swallow were on the alert with steam up &c. A gun-boat was equipped yesterday afternoon here, after Azof arrived and left harbor at 6 P.M. provisions coals, &c. on board, masts and yards down to contend with the monsoon, all got ready in a few hours, and doubtless the gun-boats about Swatow and Foochow will proceed also to

We have lately received from a highly esteemed contributor, two articles on American affairs extracted from a London paper, and sent to us for reproduction in our columns. This we respectfully decline to do, for the reason that extreme partisanship palpably dictated every line of those articles, and as much of our space is necessarily occupied with the all important American topic, it becomes necessary to exclude all party effusions, unless they should contain something forcible, feasible and logical, which the productions before us assuredly do not.

One of those articles our contributor thus heads.—A sensible English view of the recent "Confederate Manifesto." A small extract from this notice will convey some idea of the kind of spice with which it is flavored. "As "for the professions of the authors of this de- "claration of desires for peace and harmony— "the obvious comment is that peace or a con- "tinuance of the war rests with themselves. "If they are willing to live under the genuine "republican conditions which they profess to "value so highly, there is no reason to suppose "that the nation at large would refuse such a "reentrance into the Union." [The italics are ours.] This "obvious comment" beats Pio Nono's non possumus hollow; for although the traditional constitution of the Holy See may justify the Pope in leaving his territory and temporal privileges to the guardianship of Heaven, nothing can justify President Lincoln in deeming the Federal Union as any thing but a human institution, created out of the fruits of a successful rebellion.

The idea of the Southerners, after declaring their independence in the deliberate determined manner they did, after maintaining that independence against heavy odds for three years and a half, after completely battling and crippling the Federal government by the loss of a million of men and four thousand millions of dollars—after doing all this we say and declaring by their words, as well as by their deeds that they prefer independence to life, the idea of their being told that they can obtain peace by soliciting the "nation at large" to readmit them into a Federation which they mortally detest—is a pretty good indication of the all engrossing lust for dominion which actuates the North in the prolongation of this dreadful struggle.

But to tell us that this is a "sensible English view" of the case is taxing our credence too far. Our respected contributor must excuse us for expressing our belief that no true Englishman every penned those lines, nor do any true Englishmen entertain the aspirations which dictated them. The spirit that actuated the writer is the spirit that perpetuates the hopeless struggle—it is a fiendish spirit, a destroying angel. It has induced that fanatical patriotism which has prostrated the wealth and the manhood of the Northern States, and will, unless curbed, lead to their ruin and segregation. Say not then that this diabolical fanatical political sentiment, based on territorial lust and national conceit, is a "sensible English view" of the case!

The other article is from the same paper we should suppose by the width of the columns. It consists of a review on a book entitled—"The Alabama and the Kearsarge." An account of the Naval Engagement in the British channel on Sunday, 19th June 1864, "by Frances Milnes Edge." Who or what Mr. Edge is, we are not informed, but to give a specimen of his nautical knowledge—in describing the Kearsarge's chain armour, he says "in one spot however, a 32 pounder shot "broke in the deal covering, and smashed a "single link, two thirds of which fell into the "water. The remainder is in my possession "and proves to be of the ordinary 5½ inch "chain." There is no chain of such dimension—instead of measuring the chain, he has measured the width of the link, we imagine.

As for his impartiality—There is no pretence to such a profession. He admits that he obtained all his information from the Kearsarge at Cherbourg a few days after the fight, and he invariably calls the Alabama a privateer. He makes it appear that the struggle was an artillery duel, and that the Kearsarge being a bona fide man of war had necessarily the advantage over a privateer.

However—partial and innocent of the knowledge of nautical matters as Mr. Edge undoubtedly is, he gives such statistics and data as will enable the unprejudiced reader, at least in our opinion, to arrive at a correct conclusion regarding this much talked of fight—although, it is perhaps needless to state that Mr. Edge draws very different deductions from his own premises to what we do.

He admits that all depended on the pivot guns of the two ships—and there we should say he is undoubtedly correct. The Alabama's pivots were a seven inch Blakely, rifled; and an eight inchsmooth bore. The cube of these calibres combined we make 113. The Kearsarge's pivots were two eleven inch Dahlgren's—the cube of which we make 264. Those figures represent the odds—264 to 113 against the Alabama—or nearly five to two.

Moreover, these eleven inch Dahlgren guns were the very things that drove the English and French to construct iron clad ships—for it became as plain as the sun in the heavens that this gun could force so heavy a shot through the side of a wooden ship as to render her a complete slaughter house. So sensible was Capt. Winslow of the great advantage he possessed in this respect, that he had his Dahlgrens loaded with shell with five seconds fuse before engaged, and that was the reason why he did not return the Alabama's fire until he obtained the required range for his fuses, which range was seven hundred yards. As the Kearsarge appears to be a swifter ship than the Alabama ever was, Capt. Winslow could of course select his own range, and at this distance of seven hundred yards, he discharged his Dahlgress fifty five times, and as it seems to us by Mr. Edge's own account, by a mere chance struck her at last between wind and water, and sunk her. It was a certainty that of one if the Dahlgren shells should strike the Alabama it would penetrate and explode either inside the ship or otherwise in the frame of the vessel. We do not see that this was over done except in the case of the chance shot—the fatal one of fifty five. Surely there is not much to boast of in the way of artillery practice here.

How many times the Alabama fired Mr. Edge does not state. He says she hit the Kearsarge twenty seven times. He exults over the little damage which these shots inflicted, but surely that only proves the inefficiency of the Alabama's battery, not the badness of her gunnery—on the contrary, it would lead to the inference that the artillery practice of the Alabama was the better of the two. We cannot help thinking that had the Kearsarge been pierced with half a dozen eleven inch Dahlgren shells, let alone twenty seven, she would have gone to the place she sent her antagonist to.

The lesson to be learnt from the engagement is simply and solely the tremendous effect of these eleven inch Dahlgrens. The U. S. Ship Hartford that was here some few years ago, was rated as a sloop, and carried a battery of eighteen of them, if we remember right. We imagine she would be a match for one of our heavy frigates. Had we gone to war with the United States before Iron Clads were invented, they would have thrashed us at sea again by means of this gun, just as they did before, when we put jackass frigates with corronades, against their splendid frigates. Even now, the Warrior that we make such a fuss about, carries nothing heavier than 68 pounders; or guns of 8 inch calibre. The French iron-clad, La Gloire, a ship far smaller, throws a broadside of double the weight. We seem to build everything to pose of standing a typhoon.

The Kearsarge appears to be a fourteen knot boat, and to have been in commission for nearly three years. With such craft as this, it is disgraceful to the Federal navy to reflect on the Alabama's career. Her destruction may be a feather in the Kearsarge's plume, but the recollection of the "British pirate's" undisturbed career for two years, and then undisturbed career for two years, and then her seeking a fight with the first Federal ship she deemed her match, will be a stain on the stars and stripes—and by the same token, had the Alabama sunk the Kearsarge the disgrace would have been much less.

NOTICE OF REDUCTION OF PASSAGE MONEY.

IN the year 1857 the Directors made a considerable reduction in the Company's rates of Passage Money, which continued in force till 1861.

In that year, owing to the extraordinary rise in the Cost and Freight of Coals, and the enhanced price of all descriptions of Naval Stores, the Directors were reluctantly compelled to return to the rates of Passage Money previously in force. They are now happy to state that a decrease in the price of Coal and other expenses of Steam Navigation enables them to reduce the Company's Passage rates to the undermoted scale, which will take effect from and after the 1st June next, viz:—

From Hongkong to—

Suez,	$460
Malta,	510
Marseilles,	540
Gibraltar,	530
Southampton,	550

Reserved Rates for Single Persons.

Suez,	$820
Malta,	1,020
Marseilles,	1,060
Gibraltar,	1,060
Southampton,	1,100

Reserved Rates for Married Couples.

Suez,	$1,160
Malta,	1,280
Gibraltar,	1,348
Marseilles,	1,348
Southampton,	1,388

The charges for Children are in proportion to the above.

The above rates are exclusive of the amount payable to the Egyptian Transit Administration for conveyance of Passengers through Egypt, viz:—

For First-class Passengers, $32
Children above three and under ten years, half-fare.

By Order of the Managing Directors,

THOS. SUTHERLAND,
Superintendent.

EXTRACTS.

The Channel Fleet.

The fleet has received orders to proceed to Leith by the 1st of September, and to escort the Prince and Princess of Wales to Denmark. It was originally intended that the fleet should proceed by way of Liverpool and round the north of Scotland. It has, however been found more convenient to proceed first to Portsmouth from Portland, and so round by the North coast. The fleet is expected to arrive at Spithead to-day Thursday—Telegraph.

Effect of Alcoholic Drinks and Tobacco upon Health.

The following curious passage occurs in the sixth annual report of the Registrar-General for Scotland:—"All classes are agreed as to the evils produced by the abuse of stimulant (alcoholic) drinks and of tobacco. But a certain class decry even the use of these, and point to the statistics as a triumphant proof of the baneful effect of such stimulants and sedatives. No such conclusion can be drawn from such statistics, and this may be proved in the most satisfactory manner. Tobacco and stimulating drinks are exclusively consumed by males, and by almost none under 15 years of age. Yet we find that in every 1000,000 males under 15 years of age, the above brain diseases cut off annually 337 persons; whereas in an equal number of females, only 276 are cut off by the same diseases. At the very period of life, therefore, when neither sex use these so-called obnoxious articles, the male tendency to these diseases is so much greater than it is in the female, that 337 males die for every 276 females. Above 15 years of age, when, for argument's sake, we may allow that the female does not consume these articles, or at least, that the number who do is so insignificant as not to affect the general results, while the male both uses, and in many cases, abuses them instead of finding that the relative proportion of male deaths from these diseases increases, we find that it rather diminishes, so that while above 15 years of age 247 males die from these diseases in every hundred thousand males, 145 females die out of a like number of females. But the subject may be viewed in a more striking light still, by taking the proportion of each sex who die from these diseases above and under 15 years of age. By this it will be found that the relative tendency to death from these brain diseases in persons above 15 years of age and greater in the female than in the male. The only conclusion, therefore, which seems deducible from these facts appears to be that, in so far as the stimulants of these deaths go, there is no evidence to prove that the consumption of alcoholic liquors, (including every form, wine, beer, spirits, etc) or of tobacco injures the general health of the population. On the other hand, the evidence seems rather to favour the idea that the moderate use of these articles by the mass of the people so improves their health as to act as a counterpoise to the undoubtedly injurious and fatal effects to which the abuse leads in the few."—Sun.

A popular pair.

It is stated that the "Barnum" of Australia have been treating with the Rev. Mr. Spurgeon and with Tom Sayers, either of whom it is confidently believed, would "extensively draw" at the Antipodes.—Manchester Guardian.

Ireland.

Cessation of Emigration.—The vast tide of emigration which has for so long a period flowed ceaselessly from our shore, has (says a Cork paper) almost subsided. The fine steam vessels, in which the last place was usually filled, now depart all but empty. The large crowds who daily clamoured for passages have disappeared. So great has been the decrease of numbers that the emigration agents have reduced their charges considerably, in the hope of reassisting their trade. The charge for steerage passage has been reduced by the Inman Company from seven to five guineas, and by Messrs. Cunarin Brothers to six guineas nominally. It is expected that before a month elapses the rate will be as low as £3 10s. per head. A plentiful harvest at home and the absence of inducement to the other side of the Atlantic appear to have acted powerfully in changing the destiny of many of our impulsive countrymen.

A Blockade Runner.—A correspondent writes:—"A magnificent and rapid sailing steamer, with three funnels, has just visited the Shannon. She proceeded up our noble river to the northeast of Foynes Island, and anchored after which, she suddenly steamed westward, towards Tarbert. While at anchor near Foynes, a warlike party landed, and made inquiries about a special train for Limerick; and they appeared disappointed when they could not proceed by rail. It is supposed that the vessel is a blockade runner, and it was rumoured here that a lieutenant of the celebrated Alabama was one of the party who landed at Foynes. Since writing the above I have ascertained that the steamer has arrived to convey an immense supply of clothing to the Confederates from Intl, Limerick."—Times.

Novel Statistics.

Mr. Sala, in his last letter from New York, supplies a curious morsel in the way of statistics:—"An ingenious 'calkerator,' in Jefferson county, New York, has been 'footing' up some of the losses of the war, and the result of one section of his calculations amounts to these facts: that enough men have already been slain to encircle the entire State of New York, if their dead bodies were laid in one continuous line; that if they were placed in coffins and corded, they would count thirty-nine thousand cords; that if laid in a wall twenty-five feet thick, and thirty feet high, it would be over a mile in length, that if piled on a ten-acre lot, they would be nearly two hundred feet high; that if laid upon the ground, they would cover every foot of soil in Jefferson County, and, finally, that seventy-five thousand tons of human blood have been spilt in Dixie's Land—enough to turn every spindle in Lowell, Ney, if the tears were added to the flood it would turn the machinery of the entire continent, and the unwailing sighs would fill every ocean sail."—Telegraph.

The Gunnery Experiments at Shoeburyness.

Yesterday the most important of all the many important experiments took place. The 600 pounder gun was fired against a floating target made on the principle of the Warrior. It was intended to fire at a range of 2,000 yards, but, with a view to secure accuracy, the firing took place at 500 yards. The charge of powder, however, if increased in certain proportions, would represent the same effects at 2,000 yards. The shot that struck the target practically demolished it, and would have sunk any ship it might take effect upon. It was the universal opinion that this 600 pounder gun will sink any iron-clad ship that could be built. There is no country but England that has a 600 pounder, and we have only this one at present, but we are building more.—Standard.

Spain.

The situation of Spain appears to the Siecle by no means satisfactory, and the conduct of the Ministry to be injudicious. Our contemporary inquires why her political disturbances are apprehended, and seems to fear that such an event is not by any means impossible. It says:

"The political situation in Spain is becoming serious, and there may perhaps be something in it more grave than a ministerial crisis. Are the people there on the eve of seeing a new pronunciamiento? The fact is that at this present moment an officer and four sergeants of the Regiment of Savoy are ordered for trial before a Court martial, and the proceedings will doubtless enlighten us as to the feeling of the army. The trial, the question of the release of the Queen-Mother, the financial crisis which have the workmen of Catalonia without employment, the divisions which exist in the Ministry, the affair of the bonds of the old debt, the reproaches made against the system of the present Minister of the Treasury in putting obstacles in the way of the proper settlement of the Spanish finances—these are doubtless all elements of perturbation, and yet, as is always the case, the Government has chosen this moment of general uneasiness to make a display of strength. The old Progressists bugbear has been therefore brought forward. Seeing the high society of Madrid emigrating to the sitio real de la Granja and the seaside, the Ministry said to itself:—What is General Prim doing here? He must be conspiring! Let us therefore adopt a measure of security against him, his aides-de-camp, and friends, by removing them to a distance.' In consequence, an order, from the Minister of War, on the advice of the Council of Ministers, was sent to General Prim to immediately leave for the Asturias, where he is to fix his residence until further order. Brigadier Milanda de Bosh has been sent to the Canary Islands; Count de Cuba to Oviedo, Col. Escalante to Majorca, and Lieut. Col. Campo to Alcoy. Gen. Prim was ordered, in proceeding to the railway station, not to pass through the city, but on leaving his house to take the road which runs round the wall of fortification. A large force of the National Guard were stationed in the neighbouring streets, but, in spite of that precaution, more than 200 carriages escorted the General, and on his arrival at the station he found from 700 to 800 persons, who saluted him when he got into the carriage which took him away from his friends. This measure, which is now known in Catalonia, has, it is said produced a great effect on the populations. A Ministry which thinks it can save itself by such acts can, on the contrary, only accelerate its downfall, and so notions that of the Government which supports itself on it."

An Interview with Mr. Lincoln.

The editor of the London (Canada) Free Press writing from Washington to his paper, thus describes his interview:—

"The President's private room is just over the reception room, and is entered from a sort of square hall, about which there are many waiting rooms for persons seeking audiences with the President.

Upon entering this room, I saw persons walking to and fro in waiting. I at once placed in the hands of a messenger my card and letters (previously procured from friends in New York and Cincinnati) to deliver to the President and with scarcely a moment's delay, I was ushered into his presence, when he arose and stepped forward in a stooping position extended his hand and shook mine kindly but rather lisely, as if he was afraid of hurting it, remarking at the same time:—'I am glad to see you, sir;' he seated I replied:—'I am a stranger in the capital and have sought an interview with you, Mr. President and have been much pleased with the easy means of access.' President—'Yes: this ready means of access is I may say under our form of Government, the only link or cord which connects the people with the governing power; and however unprofitable much of it is it must be kept up. As, for instance a mother in distant part who has a son in the army which regularly enlisted, has not served out his time but has been so long on the sicklist she ought to stay, will collect together all the little means she can to bring her here to entreat me to grant him his discharge. Of course, I cannot interfere and can only see her and speak kindly to her. Now far is your place from Detroit, Sir?'—'About 100 miles east from Detroit. We have no water communication, but have a very nice inland city. I intend remaining in Washington for a few days; all seems calm and commotion here.'—President: 'Yes, there never was anything in history to equal this'—'Your position must in fact be responsible and trying, President'—'Yes, to think of it it is very strange that I, a boy brought up in the woods, and seeing as it were, but little of the world, should be drifted into the very apex of this great event.'—I read your proclamation of this morning calling for more men: it will no doubt be filled up.'—President: 'Yes, Sir, it will be filled up.' I then rose, saying, 'I thank you, Mr. President, for your kindness and courtesy.' President shakes hands again, and says, 'I am most happy to have made your acquaintance.' These words are given exactly as expressed by the President written down a few moments after they were uttered."

The Yelverton Case.

Mrs. Yelverton seems determined that she will not let the sympathy of her co-religionists die out. In a letter directed to a Cork paper, the Daily Reporter, she illustrates at some length her acquaintance with the marriage laws, and mentions facts in connection with them that are not generally known. She says:—

"As great obscurity seems to exist in Ireland as well as in England as to the nature and working of the law of Scotland, will you allow me the medium of your journal to dispel, so far as my own case is concerned, a little of the Scotch mist which envelopes the sister kingdoms? In the first place a Scotch marriage, binding on the parties in Scotland is binding all over the world and thus on account of the English International Marriage Law, which recognises as valid all marriages valid in the country where they take place. Not so with any other law peculiar to Scotland. The pulsing to silence,' for instance, could not be enforced either in England or Ireland, anymore that could be enforced a French by-law unknown in this country. The House of Lords, though sitting in London sit merely as a Scotch Appeal Court on this case, and can decide no question out of Scotch jurisdiction. The next point that I would notice is that a Scotch court has no jurisdiction to cancel a foreign marriage, as decided in the cases of De Pauly, Pitt, Sinclair, and others; hence no dictum of a Scotch court could cancel the verdict of an Irish jury. On the other hand, marriage valid in Ireland is valid all over the world on the same international principle, and it would be an interesting—a hair-splitting proposition for law-yers to determine whether a legal wife in England and Ireland could be 'put to silence' in Scotland for asserting her wife-hood. Hence the 'finality' in my case—rejoiced over by the few and deplored by the many—is merely a ruse to bring about such a result. So far from that being the case, if death were to claim me before the 12 h Nov., the decision of the Lords could never be applied in this world, and I should die by the law of the three kingdoms the wife of Major Yelverton. Upon me this attempt to settle my claims is perfectly inoperative. Having studied the marriage law, to my cost, for the last five years, I am quite satisfied that the appellant cannot enter his native country (Ireland) unless surreptitiously, without having to pay for maintenance as if wife—or living under his roof if he had one, and I were so disposed. Such also is his position in England at this moment. Neither in France a neutral ground—the laws under the Code Napoleon being somewhat summary, and instances are not unknown of parties travelling together having been lodged in prison, pending further investigation as to the injured party. In Scotland, the debatable land, the only result yet obtained by the appellant is to add the names of Wansleydale, Chelmsford, and Kingsdown to that of Ardmillan; and until the examination on oath has taken place, nothing final can be decided even in that country. Trusting that these facts may throw a gleam of light on the matter I beg to sign myself (I could wish a name more honourable),

"TERESA YELVERTON."

Curiosities of Trade.

(From the Times.)

The Commissioners of Customs inform us in their annual report just published that the imports of 1863 exhibit a certain feature which is entirely without precedent. Taking the principal articles imported—fourteen in number—they observe that eleven of these were imported in quantities greater than were received in the year preceding. Again, if we look not to the gross imports, but to the imports destined exclusively for home consumption, we learn that in eight of the principal articles a rise has been established, while in three only is there a fall. But if these are remarkable facts as thus stated, they will become still more remarkable when stated otherwise, for the exceptions in reality are, scarcely exceptions at all, and increase has been the rule throughout. Consumption and demand were actually greater in the case of almost every article, only it happened that in case of corn and flour we produced such large quantities at home that we were less in need of contributions from abroad. The principal articles purchased by Great Britian from foreign States may be classed under two heads—raw materials for manufacturing purposes, and provisions in aid of our own supplies. Some of these materials and some of these provisions are exotics, and could not be produced at home, such as cotton and tea; others, such as timber and corn, arrive in addition to our native produce. As enumerated by the Commissioners these articles stand as follows:—Cotton, coffee, hemp provisions, spirits, sugar, tea, timber, tobacco, wine, and wool. In all these the imports have been on an increased scale. That cotton should have arrived in larger quantities last year is but natural, considering the prices which where offered and the exertions which were made to procure supplies from all quarters of the globe. The actual result was a supply equivalent, as far as bulk went, to about six-sevenths of the old supply from America, but considerably inferior in quality. With this demand, too, we may connect the arrivals of hemp—an item in which jute is included—and of wool; but it is rather curious that flax and silk, which might have been expected to obey the same conditions, were in less request. It is true enough, that as the cotton supply increased, and the trade revived, there would be less pressure on its substitutes, and less need for imports of silk and flax, than there was at first. But by this rule the imports of hemp and wool should also have fallen off a little, whereas the contrary was the case, and perhaps, therefore, the conjecture of the Commissioners that the very large receipts of flax and silk in 1862 had tested the markets may be accepted as probable. In the imports designed for use at home, eight important articles have been taken in larger quantities, and three only in smaller—these exceptions themselves admitting of easy explanation, as we shall presently see. Cocoa, currants, raisins, tea, sugar, spirits, tobacco, and wine have all been in greater demand than before; for corn, flour, and coffee the demand was less. But foreign corn and flour were only dispensed with because we had such an abundance at home, while the decline in coffee may be very reasonably attributed to the increased consumption of tea following on the reduction of duty. Perhaps this leaves something still unaccounted for, but that decrease, such as it is, is literally all, the decrease which really occurred. We did not retain for our own use in 1863 quite so much coffee as in 1862, though we actually imported a great deal more. Upon the whole, therefore, when the returns of the year are explained and appreciated the result is more extraordinary than it appeared to be at first. Our imports may not only be said to have declined in fewer cases than ever, but may almost be thought not to have declined at all. The Commissioners draw one or two curious inferences from the figures before them. From the cotton returns they argue that the blockade of the Confederate ports, however imperfect it may still remain, must certainly have been maintained with greater strictness and efficiency in 1863 than in 1862; although, on the other hand, it is evident that all the attempts of the Federals—and they have been very energetic—to obtain possession of the cotton crops, and re-establish the trade with Europe, have totally failed. It was on a mission of this kind that Gen. Banks endured his disastrous defeat in Louisiana; and the anxiety shown by the Federals to open the navigation of the Mississippi arose from the same desire. Nothing, however, has been done. The direct supply of cotton from America was utterly insignificant, the bulk of such as reached us at all having been brought through the blockade. From the tea returns it appears that we now supply both America and Russia with that important article. We bring it from China, and then re-export it; so that either the overland trade between China and Russia must have decreased, or else the consumption of tea must have increased, so far as to leave room for both modes of supply. In tobacco a large rise in the imports from Maryland shows that the Federal Government, in the midst of its troubles, has found time for the cultivation of this important staple in a State which they have steadily held against the feeling of its population and the successive invasions of the Confederates. More immediately important, however than any of these deductions in the evidence collected by the Commissioners of what is termed the "elasticity" of the rate at which the increased consumption of a cheapened article will replace the income lost by the reduction of the tax upon it. In 1860, 1861, 1862, and 1863 remissions of Customs duties were made to the extent in the aggregate of £4,235,051. This amount of money, therefore, should, in the absence of any compensating influence, have been lost to the public revenue. But the loss actually experienced, as proved by the accounts, was only £1,486,687; so that the balance of £2,818,364 was restored by the mere increase of consumption. Of the average reductions of about £1,000,000 a year, fully £700,000 came back again, a "highly satisfactory conclusion," as the Commissioners observe. Nothing could be more desirable than to ascertain the exact point to which this principle could be successfully carried. We derive from these customs, or from the bill we take of imported articles, one-third of our whole revenue, that is to say, about £21,000,000. Of this large sum tea, sugar, tobacco, and alcoholic drinks contribute £20,000,000, in not very unequal proportions, the three former articles yielding somewhat over £6,000,000 each, and the latter somewhat less than £4,000,000. The Commissioners, therefore, look with natural admiration to the returns on these items, and in each case the imports are rising. It is only, however, in the case of wine and spirits that we find much prominent offered on the results. The increase in the importation of spirits applies solely to brandy and rum; rum has fallen off, as indeed has sugar of West Indian growth so that the trade of the island does not seem to be improving. Of the course of the wine trade, it is evident that the habits which were introduced by the treaty with Portugal a century and a half ago remain stamped upon us still. That treaty, much to the annoyance of Englishmen of those days, banished Claret and established Port; The result was that wine came to be regarded less as a beverage than as a strong drink, and so it is considered now. "A glass" of wine is taken as a stimulant, and as it must often be indifferent, and indifferent Sherry is less intolerable than indifferent Port, Sherry, or what passes for it, carries the day against the world. The wines of Madeira and chiefly, being full-bodied "white wines," are also rising in favour, and the Cape growers, we learn, so far from being disheartened by the loss of protection, appear to have determined on a fresh struggle. Thus the end of a measure designed to promote the consumption of light wines has been to establish the predominance of a strong wine in the public taste, and to make that wine, not without standing all reductions of duty, considerably dearer than it was before.
